

Abstract

An auxiliary device for editing documents is described. It consists of a modular key set with documents to be edited, a keyboard, and a microprocessor. The device is connected to the computer peripheral bus. The microprocessor controls the keyboard and the key set. The device is used to edit documents without the need for a computer.

5